Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

From a precarious position out on a lonely limb, I feel that I must speak once more to clarify what has been reported that I have said – and, to state publicly to teachers and other students that my daughter is in no way responsible for my actions or my words.

With reference to the attempted change in high school colors, a most important fact in the whole controversy has been ignored by those reporting interviews in the Lynchburg papers.

That fact revolves around that scarce commodity called "money"! Thousands of dollars have been invested in athletic uniforms. Many of these are still usable. It is estimated that at the present rate of replacement, it will take ten years for all the present football uniforms to be "retired". If we continue with this pensible replacement rate, with a change of colors there will be a time when we will have players on the field in uniforms of two different colors! While this appears to be good economy, it would not boost team morale! Neither patrons nor fans would wish to have our teams be the laughingstock of the District. Therefore, in spite of present statements to the contrary, money would be spent to replace uniforms in wholesale lots – regardless of their remaining years of usefulness. No sound thinking individual will deny that this change will be costly.

School money is not easy to come by. Taxpayers are reluctant to agree to a tax increase to finance an educational program when there is apparent waste of funds. While the salaries of the athletic directors and coaches are financed by tax dollars, the uniforms, equipment, etc., are paid for by gate receipts of the athletic events. Also, many costly items have been supplied by civic organizations.

Patrons and alumni of Appomattox High School are enthusiastic fans who generously support the team – winning or losing! Are THEY going to be the losers in this unnecessary tug-of-war over school colors?

Surely tradition is not a shameful thing.

The Appomattox girls are undefeated in the district for the last three years. Last year in 10 games they scored 173 runs good for an average of over 17 runs per game. The pitching and defense allowed the opponents only a total of 45 runs in 10 games, an average of a little over four runs per game.

There are six returning seniors on the team this year. They are Leedela Hudson, who hit .549, had nine home runs and scored 30 runs last year; Kay Thomas hit .583 and won five games pitching; Sharon Johnson hit .432; Glenda Paulette hit .424; Wanda Hillsman hit .378 and Zandra Crain saw only part time action and hit .666.
